

Nanciann Horvath

Actress/ Comedienne/ Nurse

Nanciann Horvath was born in Bethlehem, Pa. to a Theatrical Hungarian/Slovak family.

She decided at age 5 to be a nurse, when she saw those great white crisp uniforms!

After graduating High School (Freedom) and Nursing school (Sacred Heart Hospital School of Practical Nursing) she moved to Morristown, N. J. where she did both nursing and local theater. She also started taking classes in NYC for acting, commercials and improvisation.

When she moved to New York City's upper West Side she worked part time for a private Oncologist and studied at the HB Studios.

She also worked part time at Radio City Music Hall.

Moving out to Los Angeles proved to be a good decision because having joined AFTRA (American Federation of Radio and Television Artists) in NYC; her SAG (Screen Actors Guild) card came one year later.

Some nursing jobs include UCLA, Home Health, Set medic and baby nurse, Wellness Nurse, even Physicals for Insurance Companies, etc.

Nanciann has always seen the need to live in the present moment. Nursing has shown her we all are here to make a difference and each day is truly a gift.

After doing improvisation with the LA Connection and other LA groups she started reading and doing research about the health benefits of improv.

Her business, Improv For Health, has been building for years with health groups, businesses, church groups, schools, senior centers and anyone interested in obtaining better total health.

Nanciann is also a member of the SAG BookPals and has done her famous Dr. Seuss readings at schools, hospitals, museums, senior centers and even the LA Zoo! Says Nanciann, "Improvisation and comedy teaches us to be flexible, live in the moment and think outside the box."
